Federal Web Site: <http://www.rroc.org.au> For help with technical problems and sourcing spare parts, it can also be very rewarding to visit the Club Federal website.

The Australian RR Forum has subsections for the various models and usually has detailed discussions from enthusiasts around the world on technical problems. No password is needed for this forum but it helps to register as a user. There is a "Technical Library" also with subsections for the various models. These include such things as wiring diagrams. This web site is where you will find Concours d'Elegance Judging Guidelines for Conditions of Entry and Judging Rules. The "Members Only" section of the website does need a password but has a very obvious place for you to register. It has past editions of Praeclarum and L&D.

TEE ONE TOPICS is an invaluable technical resource. There is an index to the topics covered.

Some of our inspiration for this booklet comes from a 1971 publication of the Rolls-Royce Owners' Club of America. The late John McFarlane wrote the preface shown below.

RROC SERVICE DIRECTORY, FOURTH EDITION

What this Directory is, and how to use it.

This Directory was compiled from several sources: first, correspondence from members to the former and present editors since the publication of the last Directory in 1966; second, the 100-plus returns from the questionnaires sent out with the 70-1 "Flying Lady"; finally, the 536 listings of 1966 not recommended since then. Cards were sent to the 536 firms; of these fewer than 100 replied that they wished to be listed. Thus this Directory is about half the size of the previous one. If your favorite widget-winder is omitted, or the biggest crook on your block is listed, it's because you didn't tell us.

Firms are listed here by categories (e.g., Bodywork & Painting) and in each category alphabetically by states and by firms within states. If we have listed the best electrical man in town as a painter, it is because we were given that information. Some men can do anything; others do only one or two services. Thus the categories are not exclusive; if you don't find what you want at first, check other categories. Some of the major restorers, for example, won't work on anything that can be pushed on its own wheels, while others will do engine tune-ups.

YOU -- AND THE CRAFTSMAN

When you approach a good mechanic or other craftsman, remember that he deserves your respect. You cannot boss him nor buy him. An arrangement founded upon mutual respect and understanding will get results. Some of us complain that craftsmen are gone. Not so. Many are available, and more could develop, but many of us won't pay for their services. Hence the scarcity of good craftsmen. When you do find one, treat him fairly. Write to any out-of-town service in advance.

Restoration differs from repair. A good repair job puts equipment in good working order, but it may use any expedient or parts. The type of job desired on our Rolls-Royce cars goes farther than repair. Authentic parts, such as nuts and bolts of proper threads, should be used; and the repaired area should be cleaned and refinished if appropriate. Any body work should use proper nuts and bolts, not sheet-metal screws. Upholstery and other materials should be appropriate for the body style, and of high quality.

All this costs money. Hence there should be a detailed understanding of what is to be done, and to what standards. Rolls-Royce cars were not designed for rapid or cheap servicing. Flat rates do not exist. Even an experienced craftsman can seldom tell how long a job will take. Should an upholsterer repair any faulty door hardware that is exposed during his work? Should a mechanic replace worn guides discovered while he is grinding valves? High-quality work is best done on a time-and-materials basis. R-R jobs may be a nuisance in routine shops. Please be reasonable.

This 'unimposed' format is easiest to read on the screen.

TO PRINT THIS DIRECTORY:

This directory is in A5 format. That is, it is half the size of an A4 sheet and, folded, could fit in your glove box as a booklet.

The file is "unimposed". That is, the pages are arranged side by side in order so that they will form a 24 page landscape document which can be stapled in one corner. You will notice that both front and the back pages have a blank space on one half. If your printer can, just follow the instructions for double sided printing. Twenty four pages, printed on both sides, is only six A4 sheets so if you get it wrong the first time, it is not a big deal to do it again.

There is also an 'imposed' version which can produce a booklet that can be assembled in page order, folded down the middle and stapled or fastened in some other way.

It is planned to update this directory on this web site as other suggested listings come in. Please send any such suggestions to margaret@gillings.com Margaret Gillings (Ed.)
